The Pepper Vine.

The pepper vine grows best in a wooded valley where there is plenty of moisture and abundant foliage to protect it from the heat of the sun. It is given a rude sort of cultivation. The growers plant it, keeping the grass from its roots, and when the tree near which it is planted has no lower branches struts or poles are placed in proper position to enable the vine to climb the tree. It needs no further attention.

President Endorses Equal Suffrage.

President Wilson in an address a few days ago to a delegation from New York State gave full endorsement of woman suffrage, to be voted upon in that State next Tuesday. He said:

"It is with great pleasure that I receive you. I esteem it a privilege to do so. I know the difficulties which you have been working under in New York State, so clearly set forth by Mrs. Whitehouse, but in my judgment those difficulties cannot be used as an excuse by the leaders of any party or by the voters of any party in neglecting the questions which you are pressing upon them. Because, after all, the whole world is now witnessing a struggle between two ideals of government.

"It is a struggle which goes deeper and touches more of the foundations of the organized life of men than any struggle that has ever taken place before, and no settlement of the questions that lie on the surface can satisfy a situation which requires that the questions which lie underneath and at the foundation should also be settled and settled right.

"I am free to say that I think the question of woman suffrage is one of those questions which lie at the foundation.

"The world has witnessed a slow political reconstruction and men have generally been obliged to be satisfied with the slowness of the process. In a sense it is wholesome that it should be slow, because then it is solid and sure; but I believe that this war is going to quicken the convictions and the consciousness of mankind with regard to political questions that the speed of reconstruction will be greatly increased. And I believe that just because we are quickened by the questions of this war we ought to be quickened to give this question of woman suffrage our immediate consideration.

"As one of the spokesmen of a great party, I would be doing nothing less than obeying the mandates of that party if I gave my hearty support to the question of woman suffrage, which you represent, but I do want to speak for myself and say that it seems to me that this is the time for the states of this Union to take this action.

"I, perhaps, may be touched a little too much by the traditions of our politics—traditions which lay such questions almost entirely upon the states; but I want to see communities declare themselves quickened at this time and show the consequence of the quickening.

"I think the whole country has appreciated the way in which the women have risen to this great occasion. They not only have done what they have been asked to do and done it with ardor and efficiency, but they have shown a power to organize for doing things, of their own initiative which is quite a different thing and a very much more difficult thing, and I think the whole country has admired the spirit and the capacity and the vision of the women of the United States.

"It is almost absurd to say that the country depends upon the women for a large part of the inspiration of its life. That is too obvious to say, but it is now depending upon the women also for suggestions of service, which have been rendered in abundance and with the distinction of originality.

"I therefore am very glad to add my voice to those which are urging the people of the great State of New York to set a great example by voting for woman suffrage. It would be a pleasure if I might utter that advice in their presence. Inasmuch as I am bound too close to my duties here to make that possible, I am glad to have the privilege to ask you to convey that message to them.

"It seems to me that this is a time of privileges. All our principles, all our hearts, all our purposes, are being searched—searched not only by our own consciences, but searched by the world, and it is time for the people of the states of this country to show the world in what practical sense they have learned the lessons of democracy, that they are fighting for democracy because they believe in it, and that there is no application of democracy which they do not believe in.

"I feel, therefore, that I am standing on the firmest foundations of the age in bidding godspeed to the cause which you represent and in expressing the ardent hope that the people of New York may realize the great occasion which faces them on election day and may respond to it in noble fashion."

Red Cross News.

The Gettysburg Chapter packed and sent off this week a box of knitted woolen goods, 20 sweaters, a large number of wristlets, helmets and scarfs. The Arendtsville branch has recently sent in three large packages of hospital supplies. Friday morning 12 members were at the rooms working on hospital supplies.

—Some time Sunday night thieves broke into the store room in Dr. H. L. Diehl's building on Baltimore street occupied by the Stallman Wholesale Tobacco Company and made away with a quantity of cigars, cigarettes and tobacco. Estimated loss was $1,000.

—A fire broke out in a building on the corner of 1st and 2nd streets, owned by the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co., at 10 o'clock Sunday night. The fire was extinguished by the fire department.

Hundred Year Old College Graduate

Dr. William Gerhardt, of Martinsburg, W. Va., the oldest graduate of Gettysburg College, celebrated his one hundredth birthday on last Sunday. The mail carrier looked like Santa Claus, loaded with mail he landed at the Doctor's home. Hundreds of postcards were received by Doctor Gerhardt, the message of each being one of congratulation upon the completion of a hundred years of life by this esteemed and venerable citizen.

Among messages of congratulation were those from the General Synod of the Lutheran Church in America, from various high officials in the Knights of Pythias, and from officials and aged alumni of Gettysburg College.

Doctor Gerhardt is the oldest Lutheran minister in the United States, the oldest living member of the Knights of Pythias, and the oldest living graduate of Gettysburg College.

The veteran preacher was visited by the officers of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias of West Virginia, and presented with a hundred gold dollars. Doctor Gerhardt was the founder of Pythianism in his state, and the state's first grand chancellor. He has never lost his interest in the order, and only recently attended a meeting of the Martinsburg lodge and made an address.

Doctor Gerhardt was graduated from Gettysburg College with the class of 1841, and also completed a course in the Seminary. He occupied pastorates in North Carolina and West Virginia, and later in his life devoted himself to teaching, being president of an academy in North Carolina. He has always been considered a master in mathematics, and has published several text books.

This remarkable man reads without glasses and maintains a sharp interest in current events. He is well booked on the world war and deeply interested in the success of American arms. He is a native of Germany, but was brought to this country by his parents when a mere child. Two of his grandsons are now in Uncle Sam's army.

Doctor Gerhardt's only apparent physical defect is a deafness, a handicap of which he overcomes by omnivorous reading. He delights in attending moving picture shows, and takes great pleasure in the music from a pipe organ, which he is able to understand from the vibrations. He is able to name the different musical numbers.

Changes at Big Camp.

The Big camp at Gettysburg is still with us and as apparently as large as ever but the inhabitants thereof are departing toward that section which the birds fly at sign of winter. It is said only a guard will be left here over the winter. When spring opens it is just as likely the boys will come back to Gettysburg as it is for the birds to fly northward in spring time, for at Gettysburg there will be a camp complete in every way and with a record of healthfulness at the very top of records of camps.

The boys are going where the intensive training can be continued for the winter months. The Fourth Regiment left last week, the Seventh Regiment is going this week, and the others will go as fast as they can be moved, it is said.

A statement was recently made to us that many of the camps had been increased to war strength as it is on the western front in Europe, which means 3600 men to the regiment, and that when the camp here was running at top notch fullness, there was fully 18,000 men here. It has been really wonderful how this town fitted itself into conditions, five times larger than normal.

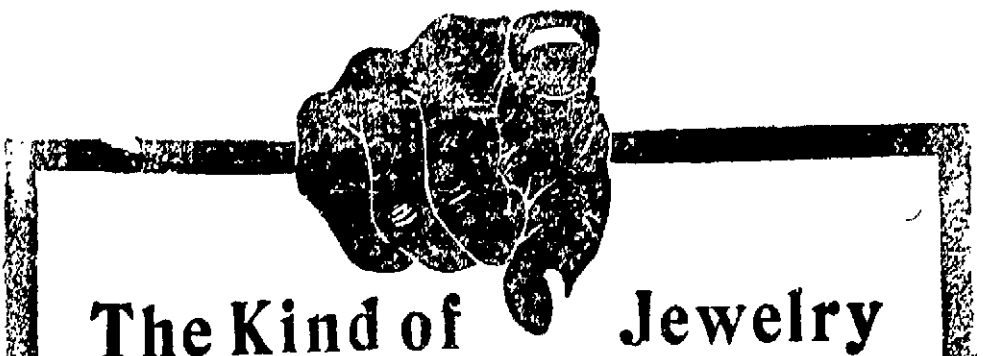

BOSTON WOMEN RECOMMEND IT TO HER FRIENDS

Popular Boston Lady Says Tontine Has Proven a Godsend to Her

It is always interesting to listen to the statements of our friends, and especially when you know they are sincere and honest in what they say. Added interest is created in a statement coming from one who has spent a lifetime in Boston, where she is well known socially.

Such a person is Annie Stewart, who resides in Boston, and is possessed of the respect and confidence of her associates, and is willing for anyone to call on her to verify the following signed testimonial.

"I have suffered with stomach trouble for the past seven years. It took the form of indigestion and dyspepsia. I had dizzy spells and headaches, and after I ate a little food it would ferment and cause gas to form in my stomach. I had pains all over my body, and was chronically constipated. My liver was torpid, and I felt generally miserable. I had doctor and had been in the hospital, but received no permanent relief. I was so nervous and restless that at night I could scarcely sleep. The gas pressing under my heart caused palpitation, and when I arose in the morning I was just as tired as when I went to bed. When this trouble was at its height, I was unable to do any work, and I was a great deal of a burden to my friends. I had tried all sorts of remedies, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was just as miserable as ever. I was just as tired as when I went to bed. When this trouble was at its height, I was unable to do any work, and I was a great deal of a burden to my friends. I had tried all sorts of remedies, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was just as miserable as ever. I was just as tired as when I went to bed. ARMORED VESSELS

How the Great Steel Plates That Protect Them Are Made.

A SEVERE TEST OF SKILL.

The Various Processes That Produce the Conflicting Properties Necessary in These Modern Projectile Resisting Warship Jackets.

Only armored warships could live in a naval battle with modern big gun projectiles in use, and hence the making of armor plate has become a science. The manufacture of armor plate has developed considerably in recent years, and in no branch of the metal industry is there greater opportunity for engineering and mechanical knowledge than in the operations of forging and rolling, followed by the exact heat treatment essential to produce the almost conflicting properties necessary in modern armor.

The plate must be hard, glass hard, to resist penetration by heavy projectiles at tremendous velocities, and yet tough enough to take the impact without cracking or shattering. Mechanically, then, the plate must have an extremely hard surface and a fibrous backing. These requirements are attained in part by the old-fashioned hammer. Molten steel was poured on a wrought iron plate and cooled. The slab was then reheated, rolled and rolled to the required dimensions. If the operations were slow, the grain of the metal would be out of the line of deformation and the process would be a modification of this process was introduced to cheapen and render less tedious the production of armor. A layer of hard steel was poured into a cooled mold, the underside quickly setting. On the still fluid or pasty surface a thick layer of soft steel was poured. By careful manipulation the union of the surfaces was almost complete, and it was impossible to detect the break in composition on viewing the fractured section. This method of manufacture was undoubtedly an improvement on the old compound method.

The increasing size, velocity and hardness of modern armor piercing projectiles have necessitated the introduction of the modern armor. The process of manufacture essentially consists in case hardening to a depth of about two inches the surface of a homogeneous tough nickel chrome steel. Special air or self hardening nickel and more complex steels are used for lighter armor, gun shields and cast armored structures.

The steel is made in Siemens furnaces and carefully cast into ingots up to eighty tons in weight. These ingots are then slabbled under powerful hydraulic presses (18,000 tons) or rolled direct to the required dimensions, depending on the power of the mills and appliances. During the rolling operation, which lasts about an hour, the slab is reversed and inverted to attain uniformity of working, and scale is removed by wood fagots and water jets. After rolling the plate is usually quenched.

The next operation is that of case-hardening, and in this two plates are put face to face, separated by a layer of the carburizing reagent if it be solid, or if gaseous hydrocarbons be used the plates are slightly separated, to allow free passage for the hardening gases, by bricks arranged in rows. The plates are maintained at redness in a car furnace for three weeks and withdrawn after the hardening carbon has penetrated to the required depth. The plates are thus carburized and so made capable of being hardened, but they are not yet actually hard. At this stage all holes are drilled and plugged, and any bending or machining necessary is carried out.

From this point onward the treatments differ. Some makers insist on heating and quenching in oil or water to remove any coarse structure that may have been formed during the long annealing while carburizing. The next essential operation is that of hardening, and this is usually carried out in one of two ways. Either the plate is uniformly heated to the hardening temperature and quenched by a series of water jets playing on the upper surface with sufficient force to prevent the formation of steam or by a process known as "differential quenching," by which the carburized surface is heated to a temperature from which it will harden and the under side kept well below, so attaining a gradual fall in temperature from the top to the bottom. The whole plate is then immersed in water, the hotter surface alone being hardened, while the back is toughened. Further mechanical operations can be carried out only by grinding or cutting with oxyacetylene, as the plate has now undergone the treatment conferring maximum hardness.

In resume, it will be noted that there are three distinct operations in modern methods of manufacture—the mechanical working of the plate to the required dimensions, the carburizing of the surface, quenching the carburized surface to harden it. These operations call for exact manipulation, supervision and control, for the skill of the engineer and metallurgist may be put to the severest tests, not of the laboratory or the testing machine, but out in the "rough stuff," when failure of a unit may imperil the safety and cohesion of the whole. WHAT DOES DEATH MEAN?

An Artist Called It "The Chance to Explore the Infinite."

A new definition of death is that by a French artist, who has now listed the truth of his own words. "Death," said he, "is the chance to explore the infinite." The definition is in the same mood as that of the late Charles Frohman as he went down on the Lusitania. It is a bit more definite, however, than "Death is life's most beautiful adventure." It expresses the nature of the adventure.

This French artist, it seems, was enamored of the space idea. He was ever viewing the world as a vessel voyaging. He endeavored with artist vision to visualize the world as rushing through infinitude by other worlds or in a stream of comets, planets, asteroids, suns. And his dream was of flights across the gulfs to Mars, to Venus, outside the solar system, to Sirius and the greater suns. With paint he strove to render what Goethe expresses in the song of the archangel in the opening of "Faust."

All the kinds of us pass over, willingly, reluctantly. We have no choice and there are no exemptions. Probably we have no choice concerning what death is to be. Whether it means extinction or confers immortality, whether it is a glorious adventure or ushering us into another sordid existence bounded by another death, we have no power to determine. We await its coming and its solution, both. We are its victims or its beneficiaries, but we have no power to change its destiny. The bold dreamer welcomes it as opportunity. The tired spirit is reconciled to it as rest. Perhaps it will bring to every man his different hope. Let us so trust.—Minneapolis Journal.

FIT THE MAN TO THE JOB.

Square Pegs Are Not Made to Go Into Round Holes.

In the American Magazine is an article entitled "Are You a Square Peg in a Round Hole?" by Herman Schneider, dean of the school of engineering of the University of Cincinnati. Dean Schneider has devoted his life to making successes out of failures and to finding the right job for the right man. He believes that failure is seldom more than an indication of the right path to success. Among other things he says: "Every individual has certain general traits; every kind of work has certain general characteristics. The problem is to interpret the traits of the individual, classify the characteristics of the job and then guide the individual into the job for which he is supremely fitted. This is one real employment problem."

"There are very many human characteristics, but there are a few broad and general ones which frequently make for success or failure."

"There is a type of a man who wants to get on the same car every morning, get off at the same corner, go to the same shop, ring up at the same clock, stow his lunch in the same locker, go to the same machine and do the same class of work day after day. Another type of man would go crazy under this routine. He wants to move about, meet new people, see and do things. The first is settled; the second is roving. The first might make a good man for a shop manufacturing a standard product; the second might make a good railroad man or a good outdoor carpenter. A failure in one line of work may prove a big success in another."

United States of America.

The assumption of the title "the United States of America" first appears in Jefferson's draft of the Declaration of Independence, and in this particular the first draft was not altered by the congress in ordaining the Declaration. The words are found in the final paragraph and thus appear in the official copy on file: "We therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in general congress assembled"—On Sept. 9, 1776, the congress first officially designated the new nation by the title and style of the United States of America.

Sip Hot Water to Relieve Coughing.

Persons chronically ill, especially those suffering from consumption, have sudden and wearing attacks of coughing. In an emergency, the Medical Fortnightly says, hot water will often prove very effective. Water is much better than some of the remedies which disorder digestion and spoil the appetite. Water very hot, almost boiling, should be sipped when the paroxysms come on.

A Hemming Tip.

In sewing hems of towels or sheets or muslin, in starting them from the end place a piece of paper under the needle and sew through it for about two inches, then on to the hem. This will prevent the clogging of the thread and needle. Then after tearing off the paper the threads are there for tying the end.

Height of Hopefulness.

He—After I am out of college, darling, I may have to wait a few months before I can make enough to support you. She—It is so hard to wait. He—dravens—I know it. But of course you know the world doesn't know anything about it.

Re-enforced Concrete.

The ark in which Noah was saved from the deluge, we are told in the story of the Bible, was an ark of re-enforced concrete with a roof of wood. This is a very apt illustration of the re-enforced concrete structure.

In nature, if you consider the structure of the human body, the bones are re-enforced with muscles and tendons.

OPENING THE BIBLE

NO PLACE FIXED IN ADVANCE.

The Passage of Scripture Upon Which the Chief Executive Presses His Lips is Entirely a Matter of Chance—The Bible is Altered the Ceremony.

The president before he enters on the execution of his office takes an oath of affirmation that he "will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States and will, to the best of his ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States" and this oath is usually sealed or confirmed by the kissing of the Bible.

The kissing of the Bible as part of the inaugural ceremony is perhaps as old as the affirmation that he "will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States and will, to the best of his ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States" and this oath is usually sealed or confirmed by the kissing of the Bible.

The custom requires that it immediately after the president has taken the oath, with hand on the Bible, the clerk of the United States Supreme Court shall throw open the book, and the incoming chief magistrate shall place a kiss on one of its open pages.

Benjamin Thomases have always thought that there was no element of chance in this performance and that the passage of Scripture is always carefully selected in advance, and the book is held by the clerk of the court in position so that the incoming chief will kiss the passage that it is intended he shall kiss, but this supposition is entirely wrong.

James D. Maher, clerk of the supreme court, said that the opening of the book is entirely "haphazard" and that no man on earth has the slightest intimation in advance regarding the passage of Scripture that will be thus brought into notice.

Usually the Bible that is used in administering the oath is bought by the clerk of the supreme court and paid for out of his pocket and is a small Oxford edition costing $10 to $15. The late James H. McKinney, for many years clerk of the supreme court, once said, "You see, congress expends money only by appropriation, and if we were to wait for congress to appropriate the price of the book we might never get a Bible on time."

There have been exceptions, however, when the Bible came from other sources. For instance, when James A. Garfield was inaugurated March 4, 1881, he carried in his overcoat pocket to the capitol a well worn, leather bound volume which had been presented to him by his mother. The book was taken from the White House and in a few years found its way to the stall of a bookseller in San Francisco. How it got there has never been known, nor is it likely it ever will be. A few years ago it was offered for sale at a very high price.

Chester A. Arthur took the oath of office just after midnight at his home in New York city Sept. 20, 1881. The Bible used was one belonging to the then chief justice of the state of New York. It is cherished by the Judge's family as an heirloom.

On March 4, 1885, when Grover Cleveland was inaugurated president for the first time, he, like Garfield, kissed the Holy Book which was given to him by his mother. It was a small volume, bound in red leather, and was presented to him many years before. The book is now in the possession of Mr. Cleveland's married sister at Toledo, O. The Bible upon which he took the oath in 1893, eight years later when he became president the second time, was one presented by his beautiful wife, and she became its possessor.

When Benjamin Harrison was made president March 4, 1889, the Bible used was one that his wife had given him on the day of their marriage in Oxford, O., where President Harrison spent his school days. The Harrison Bible is owned by Mrs. James R. McKee, the daughter of ex-President Harrison.

President McKinley used a Bible that had been presented to him by the negro bishops of the country. It was the biggest Bible ever seen at the clerk's office, and Clerk McKinley in relating the incident said: "The day before the inauguration one of the bishops called at my office with the Bible. It was a huge affair of the type known as family Bibles. It rested in an ornate box lined with purple velvet and ornamented with gold. The box was fastened by lock and key. When I realized that it would be my lot to carry that huge Bible from the senate chamber clear out to the front of the capitol my knees grew weak and I could not refrain from asking the Bishop jokingly where the wheelbarrow was that should go with it."

The inviolable custom is that on the day following the inauguration the clerk of the court takes the Bible to the White House and presents it to the first lady of the land as a souvenir.—Exchange.

KNOW THE CAR'S LOAD.

Method by Which a Motorist Can Get the Best Tire Service.

"Perhaps the greatest and most important thing a motorist should know about a car is its weight with the average load carried," says an expert. "By knowing the weight of his car when loaded ready to run the motorist is in a position to regulate his tires so that they not only act as the best shock absorber obtainable, but are fit to offset any injuries which may come from over or under inflation."

"With the weight of the car known when preparing for a trip which includes passengers it is very easy for the motorist to regulate his air pressure in the tires so that they will run with the least injury to themselves. This foresight will also prevent a break in the side walls caused by an overload."

"With the weight of your car, plus the weight of gasoline, water and extra tires, with the weight of the passengers added, you have the total running weight of your car."

"For a quick way of determining what air pressure you will carry in your tires if you have no regular table of inflation the following table is suggested:

For three-inch tires divide the weight of the load by thirty-two.
For three and one-half-inch tires divide the weight by forty.
For four-inch tires divide the weight of the load by forty-eight.
For four and one-half-inch tires divide the weight of the load by fifty-six.
For five and one-half-inch tires divide the weight of the load by seventy-two.

"To further illustrate the working out of the above table suppose your car weighed 2,880 pounds and you are using four-inch tires. From the above we find that for four-inch tires the weight of the load should be divided by forty-eight. This will give you sixty pounds air pressure, which should be carried in your tires. The tire mileage will be greatly increased if the motorist will regulate his air pressure by the load he carries."—New York Sun.

CHARM OF FLOWERS.

Gardening Is a Hobby That Becomes Akin to a Passion.

Barring the equally ancient and alluring pastime of going a-fishing, no hobby has a stronger grip on its devotees than gardening. At 4 o'clock of a summer morning Celia Thaxter could be found at work in her radiant little island plot, a sister in spirit to old Chaucer when on his knees in the grass at dawn to watch a daisy open. And these were not exceptional, not extraordinary, cases of devotion. They were merely typical exponents of the true gardener's passion.

Nor is this intense enthusiasm fleeting. Not in the least. It is not more transient than the bibliomaniac's passion, no more evanescent than the collector's zeal, which only death can quench. It is no sudden, youthful fervor. Indeed, it is rarely found in youth at the storm and stress period, while it may be observed to be strongest in those for whom the days of wild enthusiasm are over. The bachelor clergyman or the quietest of spinsters, for whom other passion is nonexistent, will yet lavish on their gardens enough devotion to have won the heart of the most obdurate of persons, enough tenderness to have sufficed for the mothering of a dozen little ones. A garden is the world of the recluse, the passion of the lone man or woman, the diversion of statesmen, the recreation of poets and artists of all ages, except perhaps musicians, who may be over-careful of their hands.—Frances Duncan in Scribner's.

Plan of the Ball Field.

In the Woman's Home Companion C. H. Claudy says:

"Whoever did the calculating for a baseball field made a fine job of it. It takes just so long to run from plate to first, and it takes just about that long, less a tiny fraction of a second, for the average ball to be fielded by the average shortstop and hurled down to the big mitt waiting for it. The least slip, hesitation, fumble or wait, and the umpire is going to spread his hands palm down for a 'safe.'"

Kidney trouble needs kidney treatment. Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only. Have convinced Gettysburg people of their merit. Here's a Gettysburg case: Gettysburg testimony. Kidney sufferers hereabouts should read it.

Mrs. G. Reidingen, 120 Hanover St., says: "About two years ago I had trouble with my kidneys. They acted irregularly and my back and head hurt me a great deal. One of my family had received such good results from Doan's Kidney Pills, that I got some at the People's Drug Store. Doan's gave me great relief and at all times I speak very highly of them."

A ROMAN SCARF PIN

It Started a Romance

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

My grandfather was a sporty old gentleman and at sixty-three was as marked in his attentions to the ladies as a young man of twenty-five. And there was something about him that drew the fair sex to him. I have seen a girl of twenty-five leave a young man of twenty-five to chat with the old gentleman, very much to the younger one's dissatisfaction. I liked to hear him tell his escapades, and one day he related the following story:

When I was a young man a railroad train was a very different conveyance from what it is now. There were no sleeping or parlor cars, the coupling was the old method—by means of a pin and link, permitting the cars to swing from side to side—and, as for lights, there were nothing but lanterns. When a train passed through a tunnel these lanterns were left unlighted and the passengers in darkness.

I was traveling one day on one of these heavily loaded tourist trains—I think it was the one years old at the time—when I had an adventure which influenced my whole life. On the opposite side of the car, several seats before me, sat a very pretty girl. She had a mouth that can only be described as kissable. I would have defied any one who saw it to refrain from wanting to kiss those vermilion lips.

At any rate, as soon as I saw them I was seized with a desire to kiss them, and the officer I looked at them the stronger became the inclination. We had traveled in the same coach for several hours when suddenly the train shot into a tunnel.

The moment we were left in darkness an idea popped into my head. It was to go across the aisle and kiss those lips. I knew the tunnel and that a train would pass through it. I would have what time I needed. The girl would not know who had kissed her. She might suspect me, but she would not be certain that I was the aggressor, and I had confidence in my ability to look innocent.

I arose from my seat, counted three seats forward by putting my hand on their backs and sought the girl by feeling for her. My hand touched her sleeve. I bent forward, brushed my face against hers till my lips met hers and took what, under the circumstances, might be called a reasonably long kiss.

I expected a shriek, but beyond a not overloud expression of surprise, which was drowned by the rattle of the train, there was no comment on my audacity. As soon as I had gratified my desire—every one knows how sweet is a stolen kiss—I retreated to my seat, and when the train left the tunnel my head was resting on the back of my seat, and I was a picture of innocent slumber.

After a few minutes I opened my eyes, yawned, looked out of the window and then about me. The girl was quietly reading a novel she had been perusing when the train entered the tunnel. I was pleased that she did not appear flustered. Her lips looked more kissable than ever, and I wished the whole journey were in a tunnel and I could repeat what I had done an infinitum.

A young man is particular as to the set of his neckwear, and I passed my hand over my scarf to make sure that I had not disarranged it while stealing the kiss.

My scarfpin was missing.

There was something on which I had not counted. The pin was a gift and a valuable one, a mosaic my mother had brought from the Eternal City. I knew that I had lost it while taking the kiss and had probably dropped it on the seat occupied by the girl or on the floor at her feet. But to look for it there would be a dead giveaway. What should I do? Brazen it out by making a search for the pin where I had lost it? I dared not.

In those days at the end of the car were a water cooler and a tin cup. I arose from my seat, walked slowly forward to the water cooler, took a drink of water, turned and went back to my seat. As I passed the girl I glanced on the ground at the seat on which she sat. I saw the pin. It was a mosaic, like the one my mother had brought from the Eternal City. I picked it up and hid it in my pocket.

When the conductor came to the train after it left the stopping place, and saw me still sitting there he took stock still. This in itself was not alarming. I caught a ticket to a point about twenty miles ahead. The girl for some unexplained reason, turned and looked my way. There was the same suspicious look in her eye. The later might have meant amusement, or even of indifference.

When we got together for another ten minutes, when the girl began to gather her belongings. Thank heaven, she was preparing to alight. True enough, when the next station, Talbottsville, was announced by the brakeman the young lady arose from her seat and moved to the door. She had scarcely reached it before I changed my seat for the one she had left and begun my search.

I looked on the seat. I looked on the floor. I lit a match to see better while hunting beneath. No pin was to be seen. I examined the aisle between the seat I had occupied and that on which the girl had sat. I was doomed to disappointment.

I now suspected that she had my pin. I left the train at the next station, took a cab and rode back to Talbottsville. There I visited the two newspaper offices of the place and left an advertisement at each stating that a mosaic scarfpin had been lost on a certain train and the finder would be properly rewarded for its return; no questions asked. Then I went to my home, having left instructions at the offices of the papers to send me any replies that might come for me.

A couple of days later I received a letter signed Julia Waterman stating that she had found a mosaic scarfpin on the train mentioned. As to "no questions asked," the finder of the pin would ask the questions. She would return the pin without reward after the loser had explained how he came to lose it.

My suspicion of an amused smile was now explained. The girl had had my pin all the while I was looking for it. It was evident that I must confess. I wrote Miss Waterman that no girl with such kissable lips should be permitted to travel on any train that passed through a tunnel, for they offered an irresistible temptation. I was quite willing to give my pin, though it was a gift from my dear mother, for the kiss I had taken. It grew sweeter each day in my memory. If she would accept the one in lieu of the other I would consider the account closed.

The next day I recovered my scarfpin by express and a note saying that the writer had no kisses to dispose of in exchange for anything. She reserved the right to give her kisses to whomsoever she might choose. Not another word did she write. There was no demand for an apology or for a confession from me that I had committed a wrong. What I didn't like about it was that it closed the book on it.

Now, I did not propose that I should be eloped. I wished to form the young lady's acquaintance with a few letters and a few visits. One word! Not a dozen. A dozen! Not a hundred, a thousand, ten thousand. But how reopen the mystery? I must invent some plan. Almost any plan would do, provided the young lady would be pleased to make my acquaintance. No plan would suffice if she desired that the matter be dropped. In other words, I might be the winner by pushing on, and if I did not push on I would certainly be a loser.

I wrote her that I would be glad to expiate my robbery by giving her my scarfpin, but since she would not accept it in exchange for what I had taken, I would be only too glad to donate it or its value to any charity she might designate. This would not be disposing of the kiss for her own benefit, but for the relief of the needy. With this note I sent the scarfpin. The offer without the pin would have been useless. By sending the pin I forced her to take another step.

When a woman gives way to a persistent admirer, she is apt to do so all of a sudden. Miss Waterman replied to my note in a very different vein than before. She wrote me that I had behaved very well in atoning for my fault. As to what should be done with the pin, perhaps we had better talk the matter over. She would be pleased to have me call upon her for the purpose on a certain evening.

Napoleon at the battle of Wagram, when he saw a certain maneuver of the enemy, closed his fieldglass, considering the battle won. I folded Miss Waterman's note, considering that an acquaintance formed in such manner was beneath her dignity. At any rate, she held me at some distance. This did not trouble me at all. There was plenty of time for it to wear off, and I made no intention of pressing further. She did not come to my house. She was not at all time for receiving me, and I had no more to say to her. I had no more to say to her.

Miss Waterman must have retreated her giving way or considered that an acquaintance formed in such manner was beneath her dignity. At any rate, she held me at some distance. This did not trouble me at all. There was plenty of time for it to wear off, and I made no intention of pressing further. She did not come to my house. WHY RUSSIA WANTS REPUBLIC

Any Other Form of Government Would Present Many Difficulties, If Not Impossible.

A last point to which I wish to call attention is that from the first hour of the revolution the republican idea made extraordinary progress in the minds of all classes, writes "Captain X" in Sensations. "I live among Russians and could therefore watch its growth day by day. Men of letters and men of business, merchants, financiers, lawyers, professors—I saw them, one after another, come to the same way of thinking. For the first weeks it seemed impossible to many of a conservative turn of mind that there should be a Russian republic. They said:

"Our country is not ripe for one. Think of all the hard experience which you French went through before the republic was really at home in France, and yet your people are highly developed, while ours are not." And so on. These same men have now come round, little by little, to the republican idea. One reason is that any other form of government would present many difficulties. If, indeed, it is not impossible. The Romanoff dynasty is discredited, to say the least; it is not conceivable that it should be reinstated, and there are no other available aspirants to the throne, even supposing that the nation wished to return to a monarchy.

Anyone who feels inclined to pronounce judgment upon the Russian revolution should bear this in mind: the old regime was so detestable that any new one, even if far from perfect, cannot be worse. From the military point of view, which is of course what is most interesting to Russia's allies, the former system, or want of it, had so disorganized the whole country that it was becoming more and more difficult to carry on the war. It is hard to see how now either the Russians or we of the allies can suffer by the change, because what has been thrown away was absolutely worthless. That should always be in our minds when we are inclined to criticize Russia. In order that we may keep our proper mental perspective and see things as they really are.

MEN KNITTING FOR SOLDIERS

The art of knitting has long been considered exclusively a feminine accomplishment, but the theory that men have no patience or inclination to spend his leisure hours in clicking the needles has been exploded in California, where wonders never cease.

A dispatch from Red Bluff, California, records that Gordon Kline, a member of a department store there, has just completed his first knitted set, consisting of a sweater, muffler, wristers and a pair of socks, for some soldier in France.

King spent his vacation at Moonstone Beach, and there he learned to knit in an effort to forestall a threatened nervous breakdown. His sister and mother have vowed for his proficiency in the art, and say, besides, that knitting has cured him of much of his nervousness. It is no uncommon sight, say the natives of Red Bluff, to see him drop his work at the store and sit down for a "spell" of knitting.

W. F. Baird, assistant cashier of a bank at Woodland, Cal., is another convert. He is said to have won the plaudits of the fair ones in that city since his wife disclosed the fact that "Will is the best knitter in Woodland." With knitting now in vogue it develops that the banker has also mastered that art. Baird is widely known in baseball circles.

Problem for Engine Builders.

The farm tractor engine has been described as a 90 per cent engine because it is under load the majority of its time. The motor truck engine might be spoken of as a 40 per cent one, and the motor car engine as a 15 per cent powerplant, in that it is rarely if ever working at full power, such as the airplane engine is. Because of this greater load on the airplane engine, its manufacture is much more difficult. One engineer has stated that building 100,000 airplane engines would be much more difficult than building 1,500,000 motor car engines.

Judge Was Emphatic.

In his volume of recollections Balfour Browne tells a story of Justice Martin, a brief lawyer, who was noted for his "bait."

One of these is still remembered as probably the best against a clever attorney in a dispute as to child custody.

He was summoned a man who had been charged with kidnapping, and after the trial he was found guilty. His attorney, who was a famous lawyer, was called in to argue for his release.

"I have a question to ask you," said the judge. "Did you ever see a man who had been charged with kidnapping, and after the trial he was found guilty, and his attorney, who was a famous lawyer, was called in to argue for his release?"

"Yes, your honor," said the attorney.

"Well, then, what do you think of a man who has been charged with kidnapping, and after the trial he was found guilty, and his attorney, who was a famous lawyer, was called in to argue for his release?"

"I think, your honor, that a man who has been charged with kidnapping, and after the trial he was found guilty, and his attorney, who was a famous lawyer, was called in to argue for his release."

"That was half a century ago. The scarfpin was a gift and a valuable one, a mosaic my mother had brought from the Eternal City. I knew that I had lost it while taking the kiss and had probably dropped it on the seat occupied by the girl or on the floor at her feet. But to look for it there would be a dead giveaway. What should I do? Brazen it out by making a search for the pin where I had lost it? I dared not."

CHARTER NOTICE.
 Notice is hereby given that an application will be made to the Governor of Pennsylvania on Friday, December 7th, 1917, by David R. McClellan, C. F. Welsh, and C. F. Moul, under the act of Assembly, entitled "An Act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of certain corporations," approved April 29th, 1874, and the supplements thereto, for the charter of an intended corporation to be called STANDARD STONE PRODUCTS COMPANY, the character and object of which is: "to quarry, mine, cut, crush, and in any other way finish and prepare stone for market," and for these purposes to have, possess, and enjoy all the rights, benefits, and privileges of said act of Assembly and supplements thereto.
 C. J. DELONE,
 Solicitor.

NOTICE
 The first and final account of Raymond F. Topper, assignee of George E. Spangler, for the benefit of creditors, has been filed in my office and will be confirmed on Monday, the 3rd day of December, A. D., 1917, at 10 o'clock A. M., unless cause be shown to the contrary.
 G. HARRY ROTH,
 Prothonotary.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE
 Letters of administration on the estate of Francis R. Berry, late of the Township of Reading, Adams county, Pa., deceased, having been granted to the undersigned, all persons indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment and those having claims to present them properly authenticated.
 CHESTER O. CHRONISTER,
 Administrator,

Build Your Own Concrete Root Cellar

Don't let your potatoes, fruits, etc., rot and waste because of improper storage facilities. With a concrete storage cellar such things can be kept in good condition from one season's end to the beginning of the next and at no expense. You are enabled to sell when the demand is greatest and prices are highest. With our easily followed instructions you can build one at little cost, and it will pay for itself many times over. All you need is clean sand, gravel and cement. The sand and gravel you can probably get on your own farm, while SECURITY Cement can be had from the dealer named. Write for directions for building this and other things of Concrete for farm use.

The Store That Sells Wooltex Coats and Suits.

Note the snug collar and smart belt of this Wooltex coat.

YOU can tell a Wooltex garment by the way it looks at the season's end. Trim and stylish still—with that new look which the ordinary garment quickly loses.

There are twenty-seven quality points in the tailoring and the fabrics of a Wooltex coat or suit that the ordinary garment does not have.

Do you believe in quality points?

YOUTH is the thing this season in styles. Straightness to the silhouette, easy graceful lines that show a figure charmingly. Simple, handsome effects in colors, in trimmings.

That's why we feature Wooltex coats and suits for young women.

Have you the youthful spirit?
